PARTICIPATION AT PROFESSIONAL CONFERENCES / PAPERS DELIVERED

World Interdisciplinary Network for Institutional Research – Panel Discussion Panel: Law and Political Economy (LPE) ... WINIR hosted a ZOOM on January 14, 2022 [12:00 - 13:30 EST - 17:00-18:30 GMT. 1:20pm]

“Law and Political Economy” is hailed as a new analytical project that situates the study of law within a broad political economy tradition, overcoming the perceived shortcomings of the neoclassical economic analysis of law, in particular its tendency to abstract from power relations and focus on efficiency rather than social justice. The LPE movement began in leading U.S. law schools – starting at Yale, Columbia and then Harvard but has since spread to law schools in Europe, South America and elsewhere. LPE is a framework for a new “law-and-political-economy approach” to legal scholarship. Their hope is to help amplify and catalyze scholarship and pedagogy that place themes of power, equality, and democracy at the center of legal scholarship in an effort to overturn the dominance of the Chicago Law and Economics paradigm in the legal academia.

Panel moderated by Katharina Pistor, Edwin B. Parker Professor of Comparative Law, Columbia Law School.

Panelists :

- Amy Kapczynski is Professor of Law at Yale Law School; co-founder of the LPEblog, and a faculty co-director of the LPE Project
